Interviews:

As part of the admission process, the University will hold interviews with international applicants to assess their academic accomplishments from the secondary school, as well as their motivation, goals and interests. Students should be able to justify their choice of this particular University and to demonstrate whether their skills and competences as well as their motivation will help them gain good academic results and integrate themselves into the University's cultural environment. Interviewers may ask students to tell about their academic strengths as well weaknesses (and the solutions they have taken to address these) in order to measure their prospective progress within the selected department. Students may also be asked about their academic. It is very important also that students be able to respond the question about where they see themselves after graduation and how they expect their knowledge and competence will contribute to the relevant industry in their own country.
